

Clarification Regarding a Lawsuit in 2016

We would like to provide some clarification on the lawsuit in year 2016 where D-ors Limited was the Plaintiff and PLM was the Defendant.

It was alleged that we have passed off their lessons. We did not do that and have vigorously contested that in the court.

Neither our Website Designer nor we have in any way copied DMLC's teaching materials/method. There is also no way that we have held ourselves out to be a branch of DMLC/using their teaching method.

In any event, we are very happy to say that at last DMLC has finally decided to give up on their Passing-off Claim.

D-ors Limited also claimed that we have infringed its copyright relating to its website and facebook contents. We did not design our website. It was designed by a third party without our direction or knowledge. We have very responsibly admitted to a judgment regarding this. The website designer and the company have apologized and admitted to us their wrongdoings in court.

We wish to repeat the true fact that we have never copied or passed off Doors' lessons and D-ors has dropped its lawsuit against us on that. Belinda, our founder has created our methodology and we thank all parents who have supported us in the past 20+ years.
